

Adam Shrager
March 7th- 11th

The website is starting to come together. I am a little behind according to my project management document. The website hasn't actually been constructed yet and the application program interface (API) hasn't been customized yet. I have the actual layout of the website on paper now and most of my descriptions are created. I am basically at the point where I can just hand everything to my technical advisor, Justin Punzalan. I intend to do that by next week.